

Abstract

A semiconductor device is provided which has high reliability and which can reduce electrical power consumption. The semiconductor device has an element isolation region formed in a semiconductor substrate, and a depth X of the element isolation region and a width Y thereof isolating adjacent doped layers from each other satisfy an equation represented by $X/Y = 1.33$ to 1.67 .